

Spring Conference
Association for Environmental Archaeology

30th March-1st April, 2010 at the University of Aberdeen

Theme: The Environmental Archaeology of the North

This conference will explore human interactions with northern environments and will foster discussion about how individuals and communities understood, adapted to, and transformed the landscapes in which they moved and acted.

What impacts did these communities have on their environments?

How does environmental archaeology inform our understanding of northern societies?

How do social and cultural constructs shape our understanding of these environments?

First call for papers: The organising committee would like to invite oral and poster presentations based on these broad themes, involving any aspect of environmental archaeology by November 1st, 2009 to t.mighall@abdn.ac.uk
